Prizes To Log Captors.

In discussing the matter of the amount of money due persons who captured stray logs in the river, J. M. Thomas, of Ford, Ky., a former member of the State Senate, said in a letter to the Courier-Journal:

"Prior to the legislative session of 1889-1890 the laws of Kentucky were different in the matter of taking up stray property in the rivers of Kentucky. At this session of the various laws for the rivers of the State were made uniform, so that now by reference to Senate bill No. 66, which became a law, the following charges for salvage are legal: For taking up a fleet of timber, $10; for taking raft of not less than forty logs, $4; for taking up a platform of not less than ten logs, $1; for taking up logs or trees prepared for sale, 25 cents each; for taking up cross ties, 3 cents each. The rights of owners, regulation of charges, method of sale and penalties for unlawfully taking are all set out in this bill."
